The Great Christmas Light Fight: “1104” (1104)

Extended Logline: All is merry and bright as judge Taniya Nayak sets out to crown a new winner of the “The Great Christmas Light Fight.” Traveling to Dyer, Indiana, the Manfre family creates a bellissimo light show merging their Italian culture and their love for the holidays with over 55,000 pixel lights. In Topsfield, Massachusetts, the Swenson family’s illuminated pumpkin patch is ready to squash the competition with their dazzling light display and a surprise reveal that will leave viewers saying “oh my gourd!” The Michael family display is where Christmas past meets the present in a collection curated over 24 years, with 600 blowmolds and interactive elements in Hatfield, Pennsylvania. The Smith Family puts Freeman, Virginia, on the map with their country Christmas walkthrough light display complete with over 165 inflatables across four acres of manicured gardens.

The Great Christmas Light Fight: “1101” (1101)

Extended Logline: On the season finale of “The Great Christmas Light Fight,” judge Carter Oosterhouse sees the Rowe family as they transform their home into a mom-and-pop traditional Christmas display decked with multigenerational DIY decor in Madison, Mississippi. The Spacy family puts a haunting spin on their scary Christmas house paying homage to a classic Christmas film in Glendale, Arizona. In Marengo, Illinois, the Hanson family creates a farm-tastic Christmas display revamping their barn into an impressive high-tech light show complete with millions of pixels and eight-foot flames. The Tran family brings their light fascination to life at their tasteful holiday display expertly designed including a “naughty or nice” wishing well in San Jose, California.

“The Great Christmas Light Fight” is produced by Fremantle. Brady Connell, Max Swedlow and Felicia Aaron White serve as executive producers. Taniya Nayak and Carter Oosterhouse are the judges.
